Background	My name is Ramis Yarullin, and I am an Engineer-Technologist specializing in the food industry with over 14 years of professional experience. Born on October 8, 1986, in the Russia, I currently reside in Minsk (Belarus) but am open to relocation and travel for the right opportunities. I hold a degree in Food Technology, specializing in Bread, Confectionery, and Pasta products, from Kazan National Research Technological University. I further enhanced my knowledge by studying Economics and Company Management at Moscow State University. Throughout my career, I have worked in various roles, including Process Engineer, Quality Engineer, and Head of Bakery Departments, across industries such as food production, retail, and agriculture. I have contributed to leading companies, including PepsiCo WimmBill-Dann, Cheremushki Bakery Company, and O'KEY Federal Retail Chain, where I gained expertise in production planning, HACCP compliance, quality control, and team management. In addition to my professional roles, I have developed skills in advertising layout creation and farm production, showcasing my adaptability and willingness to explore diverse opportunities. I am fluent in Russian, Tatar, and English. I am passionate about creating high-quality food products, optimizing production processes, and driving innovation in the food industry. My goal is to continue applying my knowledge and skills to contribute to impactful projects and collaborate with forwardthinking organizations. Currently, I work as a Picker. My responsibilities include: - Selection, assembly and packaging of goods in a warehouse in accordance with orders; - Quality control of goods; - Work with an electronic data collection terminal; - Accounting of goods and participation in inventory;
