Background	My name's Muhammad Mohamed, I am 28 years old. My nationality is Kenya, i live in Mombasa, coast region. I graduated secondary school education from Istiqama Academy in Mombasa, Kenya. I have 4 years of experience including customer service. For the past 3 years, I've been working as a warehouse worker, My Responsibilities Include, Ensuring Workplace Safety, Maintaining Inventory Records And working as a customer service. I possess the skill of being very hard-working and determined. I always try to do everything to the best I possibly can, I will never give up until I'm positive that the outcome is what I expected and better. That's a trait I can proudly say about myself and I will always stand by it! I am very organized. I think that I'm good with time management and keeping track of certain things. I have fairly good communication skills. I would say that I am strong with utilizing grammar and I can have a conversation with others without hesitating and speaking clearly. As a normal human being, I have a lot of weaknesses that affect my everyday life. To start with it, I lack a lot of self-confidence and can be too self-critical. Over my life, I have been constantly compared to other people, such as my co-workers or friends. I always felt very imperfect and thought of it as a bad thing. Because of me constantly being brought down, I tried to fix myself to what other people would be happy with. Now, I critique myself too much and lack a lot of confidence. I am trying to overcome this by bringing myself up and accepting myself for who I am. This may affect team's because I'd keep changing my mind and affecting others actions because I'm not sure about myself. However, I feel as if I have really improved in prioritizing myself and I think I'm close to fully overcoming this weakness. In addition to that, I can be too competitive. Thinking about myself before considering a team. I know this is a bad habit but I want to be completely honest and I have seen a lot of progress. I'm trying to listen more and speak less, think about other people's ideas before saying my own. This may affect team members because others may not be happy that I seem like I'm competing against them when we'd all be a team. I am trying my best to overcome these weaknesses.
